Neuroscience and Art

Instructor: Chester Kasnowski

You may paint or draw in any medium you already have used. If you do not have art supplies, or if you are not an artist, simply bring four magic markers - red, yellow, blue, and brown - and some plain paper. Or you can just bring one black magic marker and paper. The focus will be to do some quick, small sketches that are visual experiments of different approaches to image making. The workshop is designed to give you an understanding of visual systems that neuroscience tells us we all inherit. You do not have to be a practicing artist to enjoy this workshop. You may email me with questions. Please put 'Smithsonian Neuroscience' in the subject line.
