WK 2. SYLLABUS & WORKS

JAN 26 Modern Ballet Masters from Paris to the US

He didn't dance, choreograph, or compose, but nonetheless Russian Serge Diaghilev was a ballet alchemist. With his legendary Ballets Russes he gathered extraordinary talents together from across the artistic universe to create new, epochal ballet events that would shape dance up until the present day. Meanwhile, the Soviet Union and the United States saw some of the finest creations of the 20th century. Aaron Copland created a score of enormous beauty, Appalachian Spring, working with the great choreographer Martha Graham. Jazz found its way naturally into the masterpiece Fancy Free by Leonard Bernstein and Jerome Robbins. We also look at how choreographers such as Balanchine and Frederick Ashton used classical music not originally composed for ballet and explore some devastating interpretations of Prokofiev's Romeo & Juliet. We finish with the electric choreography of Alvin Ailey to music by Duke Ellington.

British-born concert pianist Rachel Franklin has been a featured speaker for organizations including the Library of Congress and NPR, exploring intersections among classical and jazz music, film scores, and the fine arts.
